

KAMBOSOS SHOCKS THE WORLD AND WINS 4 BELTS

George Kambosios, Jr, a +650 underdog, beat hometown favorite Teofimo Lopez last Saturday at Madison Square Garden in New York City and left with four

Lightweight Championship belts. The 28-year-old Sydney, Australia native won by split-decision, though it was obvious to anyone who watched the fight that Kambosios dominated Lopez. “Ferocious” Kambosios raised his record to 20-0 by beating Lopez to the punch from the opening bell. Kambosios scored a knockdown in the very first round and dominated the action from that point through the eighth round. Lopez, traditionally a slow starter, got his groove back in the ninth and scored a knockdown of Kambosios in the tenth. The final two rounds, though—dubbed “the championship rounds”—were controlled by Kambosios. In these highlights from the fight, it was obvious that Kambosios was the clear winner. After the fight, Lopez did not accept the decision, claiming he was robbed. With a win over undisputed champion Vasiliy Lomachenko last year, Lopez was the boy wonder who could hold the belt for a long time and insisted that the Kambosios fight take place in Lopez’s hometown of NYC, but in front of the obviously pro-Lopez crowd, Kambosios continuously beat Lopez to the punch and dictated the tempo. After the first round knockdown, the fight that was supposed to be nothing more than a sparring session for Lopez turned into war. The action was fast and furious with both fighters catching good, clean punches, but it was Kambosios who landed the more effective ones. While most newly-crowned champs go into hiding and enjoy the fruits of their labor, Kambosos is anxious to get back in the ring soon to defend his titles. Who are the possible candidates? According to Kambosos, Lomachenko is in the running, as are Tank Davis and Devin Haney. The new champion would like for his first title defense to take place in his native Sydney, but stay tuned to my forthcoming columns and I'll keep you posted.

STONIE'S SPORTS HANDICAPPING

I read an article yesterday that said November was the worst month for NFL bettors in over fifteen years. While two of those weeks for me were indeed losing weeks, two others were not; and with solid numbers coming in on college football and basketball, I'm still at over 58% on the season. If you have not been following my selections, I post a new video every week and here's the link to the video from last Friday. Remember that you can subscribe to the video and get notified every time a new video is posted. I'm watching NCAA football conference championship Saturday while writing this column, so we're only a week or so away from bowl season. The NFL has reached the second half of the season and the lines are getting tighter. Also, NCAA basketball, my specialty, is revving up and conference play has begun, so make sure to tune in and make a few dollars heading into Christmas. In the meantime, remember...

If you wanna win big, you gotta bet big
There's money on the streets that can't be ignored
To me, the action is the juice
GOODLUCK2YA!
